NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY AND BURLINGTON NORTHERN RAILROAD COLLECTION HISTORICAL NOTE

The Northern Pacific Railway (NPRY) arrived in Livingston, Montana in 1882 with the construction of the depot. In early 1883, the Northern Pacific Railway began construction of repair and maintenance shops in Livingston, which generated jobs and continued growth in Livingston. At the end of the construction, the Northern Pacific Railway complex consisted of a machine shop, engine house, boiler house, blacksmith shop, 15 stall roundhouse with a 54-foot turntable, storerooms, and offices. The construction began in 1883 and was completed in 1900. In 1885, the depot was relocated to the north side of the tracks due to the wind and drifting snow. In 1888, fire destroyed the depot resulting in the construction of a two-story brick depot that was completed in 1889. After construction of the shops and depot, the railway company employed approximately 600 to 800 workers.

The Livingston complex was located between the Northern Pacific Railway headquarters in Brainerd, Minnesota and its terminals in Portland, Oregon not only because of its central location but because it was east of the Rocky Mountains. It was considered the largest facility between the two cities. In the early 1900s, passenger cars and freight transportation of approximately 16 trains traveled through Livingston daily. This volume of railroad transportation led to a large number of workers employed in the repair and manufacturing shops in Livingston. The roundhouse was the principal maintenance facility of the NPRY that served as a repair facility in addition to a storage area for engines. This increased passenger rail traffic led to the construction of a larger depot. The new depot was constructed in 1902 on the south side of the tracks and consisted of three buildings connected by colonnades.

The machine shops were considered the most valuable asset of the railroad company. The shops included the Engine Shop, Boiler Shop, and the Copper and Tin Shop. The Freight House, Yard Office and Section Department, and Signal Office operated in separate buildings. Operations continued to grow in the Livingston area with employment increasing to 1700 in 1935.

Major shop expansions occurred in 1902, 1907 and in the 1940s. In 1907, a large shop addition was built along with a new Boiler Shop and power house. In 1957, a new five track Diesel Maintenance Shop was completed. This new shop had enough space to hold three diesel locomotives on each track. The tracks sat approximately three feet above the floor allowing mechanics and electricians to work under the locomotives.

The Yard Office was located across the tracks from the Depot. The Yard Office facilitated the calling of the train crews and the assigning of switching in the yard. The Maintenance of Way Department was also located at this site and the Carmen worked in this area inspecting the trains. The Freight House was located where the Rip and Chop House Restaurant currently resides.

When the engines were operated by steam there was a large coal dock located across the tracks near the current Town Pump gas station and grain elevator (now being remodeled). The dock was used to load the coal for the steam engines. The brick roundhouse built in 1883 with its stalls and turntable was used for the steam locomotives since they could only travel forward. It was enlarged in 1898 and again in 1907. The introduction of the diesel locomotives in 1944 led to the eventual demolition of the stalls. The last three stalls were demolished in 1983.

In addition to the shops, several offices were located in the Livingston Depot. The depot offices included the accounting department, passenger service, trainmaster, and the telegraph and the signal department supervisor. The Railway Express Office was also located in the Depot. In 1959, the accounting department was relocated to St. Paul, Minnesota. Part of the Livingston railroad complex was the pole yard that provided lumber, poles and bridge material.

After WWII the growth of the auto industry and the increase in auto travel led to the decrease in passenger rail service.

On March 2, 1970, the Burlington Northern Railroad formation was due to the merger of four major railroads: The Northern Pacific, Great Northern Railway, Spokane, Portland and Seattle Railway, and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Due to this acquisition of the Northern Pacific Railway, it took over the facility in Livingston. The rail line passing through Livingston became a secondary line in the larger Burlington Northern system. In 1979 passenger service on this line ended. During the same time freight operations declined. In 1981, Burlington Northern Inc. relocated its headquarters from Saint Paul to Seattle Washington. The shops operated until the end of January 1986. In the five years prior to the shops closing many employees had been laid off. After the shops closed numerous employees remained to clean up the shops and either pack tools to ship to another location, remove tools to sell or send tools to the scrap yard. A portion of the shops and offices are now operated by Montana Rail Link.

In 1987 Montana Rail Link reached an agreement with Burlington Northern to lease the Montana southern main line from Sandpoint, Idaho to Huntly, Montana near Billings. The Montana Rail Link has over 900 miles of track, serves 100 stations and employs over 1000 personnel. It operates between Billings Montana and Spokane Washington and connects with the BNSF on both ends. On September 22, 1995, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway merged with the Burlington Northern to create the Burlington Northern Santa Fe now known as the BNSF Railway.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY AND BURLINGTON NORTHERN RAILROAD COLLECTION SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The material in the Northern Pacific Railway and Burlington Northern Railroad Collection comprises of material donated primarily by Warren McGee, Jerry Maykuth and other numerous individuals who worked for the railroad. The historical materials document the railroad operations from the 1900s through the 1980s. A few items date from the 1880s to 1900. The bulk of the collection documents the railroad operations in Livingston and surrounding areas. Please note that most of the material in Series 1, Employees/Payroll, Series 8, Personnel and Series 10 is restricted for 75 years from creation due to the personal information such as birth dates, social security numbers and employee performance records.

The records provide extensive documentation on accidents; improvements to rail lines, crossings and structures; daily operation costs; agreements and cost sharing with other railroad companies; and the shop operations. Numerous daily reports and statistics were created to document costs and efficiencies.

The documents were generated by numerous Northern Pacific Railway and Burlington Northern Railroad departments. The departments include: engineering, financial, maintenance of way, mechanical, operations, office of trainmaster, personnel, public relations/marketing and employees/payroll.

The collection includes numerous objects that were used or worn by the employees. Examples of the objects include: rubber stamps, lanterns, equipment and uniforms. The collection also includes model railroad trains and framed original railroad art.

Photographs of the Northern Pacific Railway and earlier, the Northern Pacific Railroad, comprise the majority of images in the collection. Burlington Northern Railway and other railroads are also represented. Subjects include steam and diesel locomotives, train wrecks in shops and along the rail line in Montana and beyond; Livingston Shops and depot, other railway depots, especially Gardiner depot; employees at work, employee group portraits, union and auxiliary groups, tourists on trains and at depots.

The collection also contains the records of unions and railroad organizations. Amy Downing Lodge, Association of Western Railways, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers – National Park Division 232, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Brotherhood of railroad Trainmen – National Park Lodge 295, Northern Pacific Beneficial Association and the Northern Pacific Veteran's Association comprise the bulk of the series. Union material includes meeting minutes, circulars and newsletters.

The collection includes a significant number of publications either generated by the railroad companies or about the railroad. The publications include service manuals, newsletters, train schedules, seniority lists, magazines and numerous publications on the history of the railroad. These materials are listed in a separate addendum.

In 2018 additional material was donated by Warren McGee's estate. This donation included original documents generated by the Northern Pacific, Burlington Northern Railroad and Amtrak, McGee's research on railroads and his active participation in numerous railroad associations and historical organizations. In addition the material received from McGee's estate included numerous boxes filled with his Montana research. Due to the volume, diversity and variety of material his donation was separated into three collections: The Northern Pacific and Burlington Northern Collection, the Railroad Research Collection and the Montana Research Collection. These three collections also include material donated by friends of McGee who shared his passion for the railroad and Montana history.
